	Free Media on the background of the erosion of basic rights / Free Radios in territory
	Media Activism is often confronted with a monopoly position of the publishing houses. The so called "social medias" are playing a new role. But when we hoped for diversity and freedom of information, we fail again, because of the dominance of prejudices. The idea of counterpublicity has to stand against this und we have to examine it for it's sustainability. This idea needs intervention and organisation. Media Activism is a keyword. We have to think it as a breathing network in a territory. The old theorem, not only to send, also to receive, has to be used in a new way: Depth of room, whose (individual or collective) distances need to be transformed into (social or collective) communication by mediality. Creating places and instruments, in which this process becomes a collective process of production. This country needs a lot more free radios.

13:30	MORE Voices - Concepts for reduction of obstacles of accessibility in free radios for refugees @Probühne Radio shows, explicitly produced by people with a background of refuge, are existing in some free radios since a few years. Mostly those projects started with the supposition, that this group of people is affected by structural discrimination, exclusion and racism in a special way, so that this group should express it's interests and perspectives AS refugees. At the same time the problem of the starting point is repeating here: The way into the free radio is often much more difficult for refugees than for other migrants or for people who are born in germany - because of precarious and unsafe circumstances in everyday life, because of low language skills and lokal knowledge, because of lacking knowledge about the context and not much free time, because of racism and intransparent structures and much more. The editorial group "Our Voice" from Freiburg has started to inquire members of refugee radio projects about their experiences in the radio. The idea is to get a better picture of the factors, that make it easier or difficult to find access into the radio structure, to become an engaged editor on a long-term basis and to get influence on what happens in the radio. We want to discuss the question, how we can make free radios and other community media better, so that we can create a platform for critical and resistant voices from the refugees community and movement. Moderation: Rufine Songue & Roubama Baba-Traoré (Radio Dreyeckland)

11:45	Free Radios - more than a club of old, white men?! @Seminarraum After many years of struggles in order to have more women in all spheres of society, it now comes to the point, that strict measures in the mainstream make women more visible, quotation becomes a standard and equality guidelines are getting developed. From the early years of radio activism often only white, meanwhile old men stayed. They arrange and rule the free radios and their picture in publicity. The self-commitment of solidarity, diversity, open access, participation and emancipation are not often practiced in everyday radio life. If you take a look at the index of the freedom of press (Austria dropped from place 7 to 16, Germany from 12 to 16), you will find, that emancipatory media is more necessary than before. We want to discuss the following questions: - Where are the alternatives like free radios that have a traditional self-commitment of emancipation and solidarity? How do we handle equality of gender, diversity and change of generations? - Can digital platforms of program exchange and social media help to realize our ideals? Moderation/Speaker: Niki Matita (Freies Radio Berlin)
13:00	Lunch @Probekühne
14:00	Pope or revolution? Diversity and leftwing claims of emancipation in conflict @Probekühne When the portuguese radio show celebrates the pope or the "Schwule Welle" (gay wave, radio show) only plays worst mainstream hits, some radio activists, who once claimed to create a counter publicity, start to feel a bit uneasy. On the other hand: If there would be no portuguese or gay radio show (and in first line: if it had not existed already 30 years ago), the free radio would also have lost it's own ideal: Young gays wouldn't have had the possibility to get in contact with the scene via UKW in their own safe livingroom and there wouldn't be a local source of information in portuguese language. In everyday life of radio crews the two initial ideas of free radios - accessibility and counter publicity - get in conflict again and again. And the more diverse the editorial teams become, especially when more members were politicly socialised at different places of this globe, the more complex and multylayered becomes the discussion about this supposed conflict. Because: In what way are the political categories that we use in our radio context also valid in other parts of the world? Which potentials are getting lost, when we only let our political/cultural codes rule the editorial working? Moderation/Referent*innen: Anna Trautwein & Niels Wätzel (Radio Dreveckland)
15:30	What kind of structures do we need next to daily radiowork to support members with unsafe residential status? @Probekühne Moderation: Luise Marbach (Radio CORAX)
